

Dear parents, carers, and students,

Today we close out another great Education Week 2021 – celebrating virtually this year of course. I have seen a lot of innovative and creative celebrations from homes over the last few weeks and enjoyed seeing the many photos and videos of students and parents embracing this year’s theme of ‘Lifelong learners’.

Our theme celebrates education as a continuous journey that starts before a child enters an early childhood setting, progresses through to primary and secondary school, and continues into adulthood as our learners master a trade, pursue tertiary education or enter the workforce.

Education Week is a great opportunity to collectively acknowledge our work and NSW public education while celebrating the achievements of schools, students and learning community.

I would like to express my appreciation of our teachers, school administration and school support staff for their hard work and dedication. Despite the tough times, you all continue to show strength, resilience and a commitment to ensuring the best outcomes for our students here at Kariong Public School.

Make sure you check out the great video of our virtual lifelong learners by clicking on the link below.

Have a great weekend and stay safe.
